The five films from the series "RESF: A RESISTANCE NETWORK" were produced in Marseilles from November 2006 to April 2007, period during which the "360° et même plus" film collective followed activists of the RESF 13 Network*, on various actions or initiatives: mobilizations against deportations, civic sponsorships... These newsreels, between documentary and report, are part of a broader will to account for events or phenomena rarely or summarily treated by the dominant media.

*Created in 2004, the Education Without Borders Network (RESF) acts mainly to obtain legal status for undocumented families with children going to school. (More details about RESF on page 2)

EDUCATION WITHOUT BORDRES NETWORK (RESF), A BRIEF DESCRIPTION —

The Education Without Borders Network (RESF) is an informal network made up of collectives, associations, trade unions and individuals campaigning for the regularisation of undocumented families with children going to school.

On June 26, 2004 a meeting was held at the Paris Trade Union Hall bringing together teachers, state education staff, schoolchildren's parents, social workers, collectives, trade unions and associations with a common preoccupation: the precarious situation of undocumented young adults going to school and of undocumented families with minors going to school (from kindergarten to university). They decided to create a supporting network for these young people, the RESF network.

In January 2008, the national network was made up of 221 organisations including 103 local RESF collectives.
